Ten years after moving them up there, Caltech employees and contractors are moving giant millimeter-wave radio telescopes from the White Mountains, through Westgard Pass (above), and back down to the valley floor to the Owens Valley Radio Observatory outside of Big Pine. The dishes are being removed from Cedar Flat where for the past nine years they were part of the multi-university-funded CARMA project. A loss of funding from the National Science Foundation led to CARMA’s closure and the return of the site to its natural state. Transporting the 23 dishes from the White Mountains, through Westgard Pass (above), and back down to the valley floor to the Owens Valley Radio Observatory outside of Big Pine is closed to oncoming traffic, due to the size of the radio telescopes. District 4 friends Sabina Andreini (l) and Haylie Stelling (r) check the standings after the First Go. Both competed in multiple events, Andreini making the Short Go in both Barrel Racing and Goat Tying where she finished eighth and fifth respectively.

Joslyne Saco washes down "Angel" with boyfriend Edgar Machado. Saco scored a 149 in the cutting to lead the First Go. She went on to make the Short Go and finish ninth.

Jake Franceschi is a District 3 rookie out of Dixon. He did well in several events, missing the cut for Short Go in steer wrestling by just one. He may be a rookie, but give credit where it is due: biking around the fairgrounds in a pair of shades is definitely a veteran move.

Wade Loucks is a top bareback rider. "I’ve been on stock contractor horses so I feel like I’ve got a leg up," he told us early in the week. He was great explaining the rules and scoring of bareback competition, and there was some buzz on Facebook that his rides were even better than the winner’s.

Wyatt Bankus has a pretty major title next to his name: State President. Besides competing in steer wrestling, calf roping and cutting, his job keeps him busy assisting adult board members and it relies heavily on his knowledge of the rules. He’s out of Oakdale High School and this is his second year making the state finals.

This picture doesn’t do justice to winner of the tie down roping, Clayton Bacon. His scores were a lightning fast 12.64 in the First Go (pictured), 10.94 in the Second Go and 11.59 in the Short Go. Multi-talented Bacon also made the Short Go in steer wrestling, where he finished in a three-way tie for fifth.

Rookie Ronan Hice won All-Around Rookie of the Year District 5. He came to these finals for steer wrestling. Steer wrestlers can’t mess around too much, the tips he tries to keep in mind are specific. “Stay calm, thinking about bending my knee, center on my horse, and catch that steer,” he said.

Rookie Bailey Danylo of District 8 finished first in the First Go of barrel racing, at the time the only rider ahead of Bishop’s hometown girl Kayla Inderbieten. Her time was 16.708. ‘I’m really blessed to be here and win the first go,’ she said. She went on to make the Short Go, and held on to finish tied for fourth, good enough for nationals.

Don’t be fooled by the lofty title of State President. The minute we turned our backs on Wyatt Bankus, he donned a sombrero and began holding court for a crowd behind the barns.

One more time for Zachary Hanko. He may not have won the bareback, but some of the moments of this Thursday night ride need to be seen to be believed.

Bryon Tillary came to watch his granddaughter, Lily Tillary. She was last year’s all around champions and national pole bending champion. He’s proud as heck, and says, “They get buckles and saddles by the dozen. Give these kids scholarships.”

FACES & PLACES
New improved Special Rodeo brings the crowd and entertains hometown kids

By Lewis Israel
Beggs Call

Despite whom you ask, the CHSRA Rodeo Finals week means different things to some. Some of the top kids are all about the heat of the competition. Others come mostly for a good time with family and friends. Photographers and retailers come for the good business. But for some special needs kids, it’s a time to be proud.

This year, that meant dozens of heroes and dozens of special needs kids. The positive attitude of CHSRA, the partnership with Achieve Behavioral Associates, the Bishop Lions Club getting out the word, and Tracy Scott’s own special needs leadership were all on display — the Special Rodeo went from flaw, fault, perhaps for some special needs kids and a few caring young participants, to something much bigger and better than ever before, delivered as promised.

As the rodeo competitors and queens helped special needs kids rope and ride, dummie broncs and cattle in the late afternoon sun on a bright, sunny afternoon, it was easy to see he’s got skill and Johnson’s top priority. Just teaching the kids to relax, to be patient, to have good sportsmanship, he’s got skill and Johnson’s top priority. Just teaching the kids to relax, to be patient, to have good sportsmanship.

The extra effort that went into improving this year’s Special Rodeo was well worth it; the turnout was outstanding.

Special Rodeo draws great crowd

Alyx Booth and Jenna Decker enjoying the sunshine and their medals. Decker has attended many rodeos in the past and it is a big fan. For Booth, an eighth grader at Home Street Middle School, this was his first year checking out the rodeo.
